LAMP HOLDER, CAST BRONZE WITH OPENWORK, ENGRAVED, AND PUNCHED DECORATION

SPAIN, ANDALUSIA; 10TH CENTURY

H: 50.5 CM

This candlestick – or perhaps lamp holder – is of a type that was only found in Umayyad Spain. The central, temple-like architectural section, in particular, brings to mind Byzantine art, which in fact also exerted a major influence on architecture, mosaics, and other decorative art in Cordoba under the caliphs. The Arabic word baraka (blessing) is repeated around the base.

There are a number of fragmentary lamp holders of this type, some of which feature more a detailed treatment of the architectural elements and the birds that crown them. The museum's piece, in contrast, is the most complete.
